EMERSONIAN

EMERSON COLLEGE
BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS

The Class of 1971 dedicates its Yearbook to the man who has given us the gift of Self. We thank you, for you have given us something that we can never lose. You have given us more than words, for you have shared your strengths and talents with us, and you have given us your heart. You have made us laugh and you have made us cry, but most important, you have made us think.

You have helped us just as much as you have been helped by the special people in your life, some of whom we know: Pat, your wife; Chuck and Tracy, your children; Frances LaShoto, your friend and teacher; and of course, Pamela. To some you have been a father, to some a special professor, but to all of us you have been a friend.

JOY

for James Randall

Her event happened to them all.
What with the pleasure she took in birds out the kitchen window, the color of roses and shadow;
blood lines: poems.
Like that, gulls shot from the sun.
The ribbed sky a beginning to believe in.
Moths cracked their heads against the screen.
Raving, crickets wore away the field and fireflies burned out like phosphorous at daybreak.
All (they tried to tell her) skin for skin treasureless in the way things go:
harbormaster breakwater sunset.
She was so happy some disappeared, jealous or scared to death
a tide would take her unaware.
Others lived inside their porches shortening the days like skirts.
But certain ones dared her;
the ones who reminded her of shadows of roses waiting as days wait, for use.
She loved to tell them
See this is new.
The moon moving like a soul higher and whiter, so old they had few words:
the sea near full.

WHO TOLD ME
I WAS NOT COLLEGE MATERIAL

I DREAMED I CAME BACK TO YOUR OFFICE,
A TEACHER
WITH DEGREES AND WRITING AWARDS
PINNED ALL OVER MY CLOTHES.
WHEN YOU ASKED HOW I GAVE MY STUDENTS
A FEELING FOR POETRY, I TOLD YOU
I HAD THEM LIE SOAKING WET ACROSS A BED OF ALKA-SELTZER.

"HOW PROGRESSIVE!"
"HOW PROGRESSIVE!", YOU SHOUTED
AS YOU BARKED AND CLAPPED

"NIGHT RIDE AND SUNRISE" or
"THE CLOSEST I'VE BEEN TO NEBRASKA"

The towns are closed and dark, almost Indistinguishable from the trees we've passed.
It is late.
Your arm is on the arm rest.
Your face is pressed and balanced
In your hand as if
It is no longer a part of you.

I smile at your sleep
And dream your dreams
Are of this night ride.
That we are being pulled
By a skeleton locomotive
Spewing black smoke
Into an empty sky.
This has often been your dream.
To be taken where you've never been,
Frightened by the strangeness
Of something new, something
Not belonging to you.

I stop breathing
And turn to the window.
Farms flash by, always with a light.
I envision farmers
Drying their wind splashed eyes
On the tail of a horse.
When they hear this train
They believe it carries Someone they know.
When it cuts through their land
Their children hang from fences shouting
This is our home, where we live!
Everything disappears in my breath.

You awaken and tell me
You have dreamed of a strange land
And it was almost a nightmare.
I fall to sleep telling you
The sun is beginning to rise
And when we get
To where we are going Wake me.

Joseph Newman

WAKING

This will be the day she asks about herself Did I hurt you so much? It is her way; in her way she will ask this. She will laugh and leave you with it.

It was a training ground of skin and fire for winter and water, that one poem you will have hold of:
the song which is rain:
the painting one knows like a birth place:
those houses you unbuild to inhabit; yours. You will be livable yourself today. You will say you are the ones you left and the best reason for it.
Just so: old leaves make their exit in the lamplight.
Fish commit themselves to death in soft seasons.
Just so: she will paralyze herself—she knows you—and you know that as you know her and write her off as a dead metaphor. Used up, she is so much the poem she is more than music, shelter, you. So much more than the body you borrowed and its deepest movement, still, still, you will not, ever, be able to answer
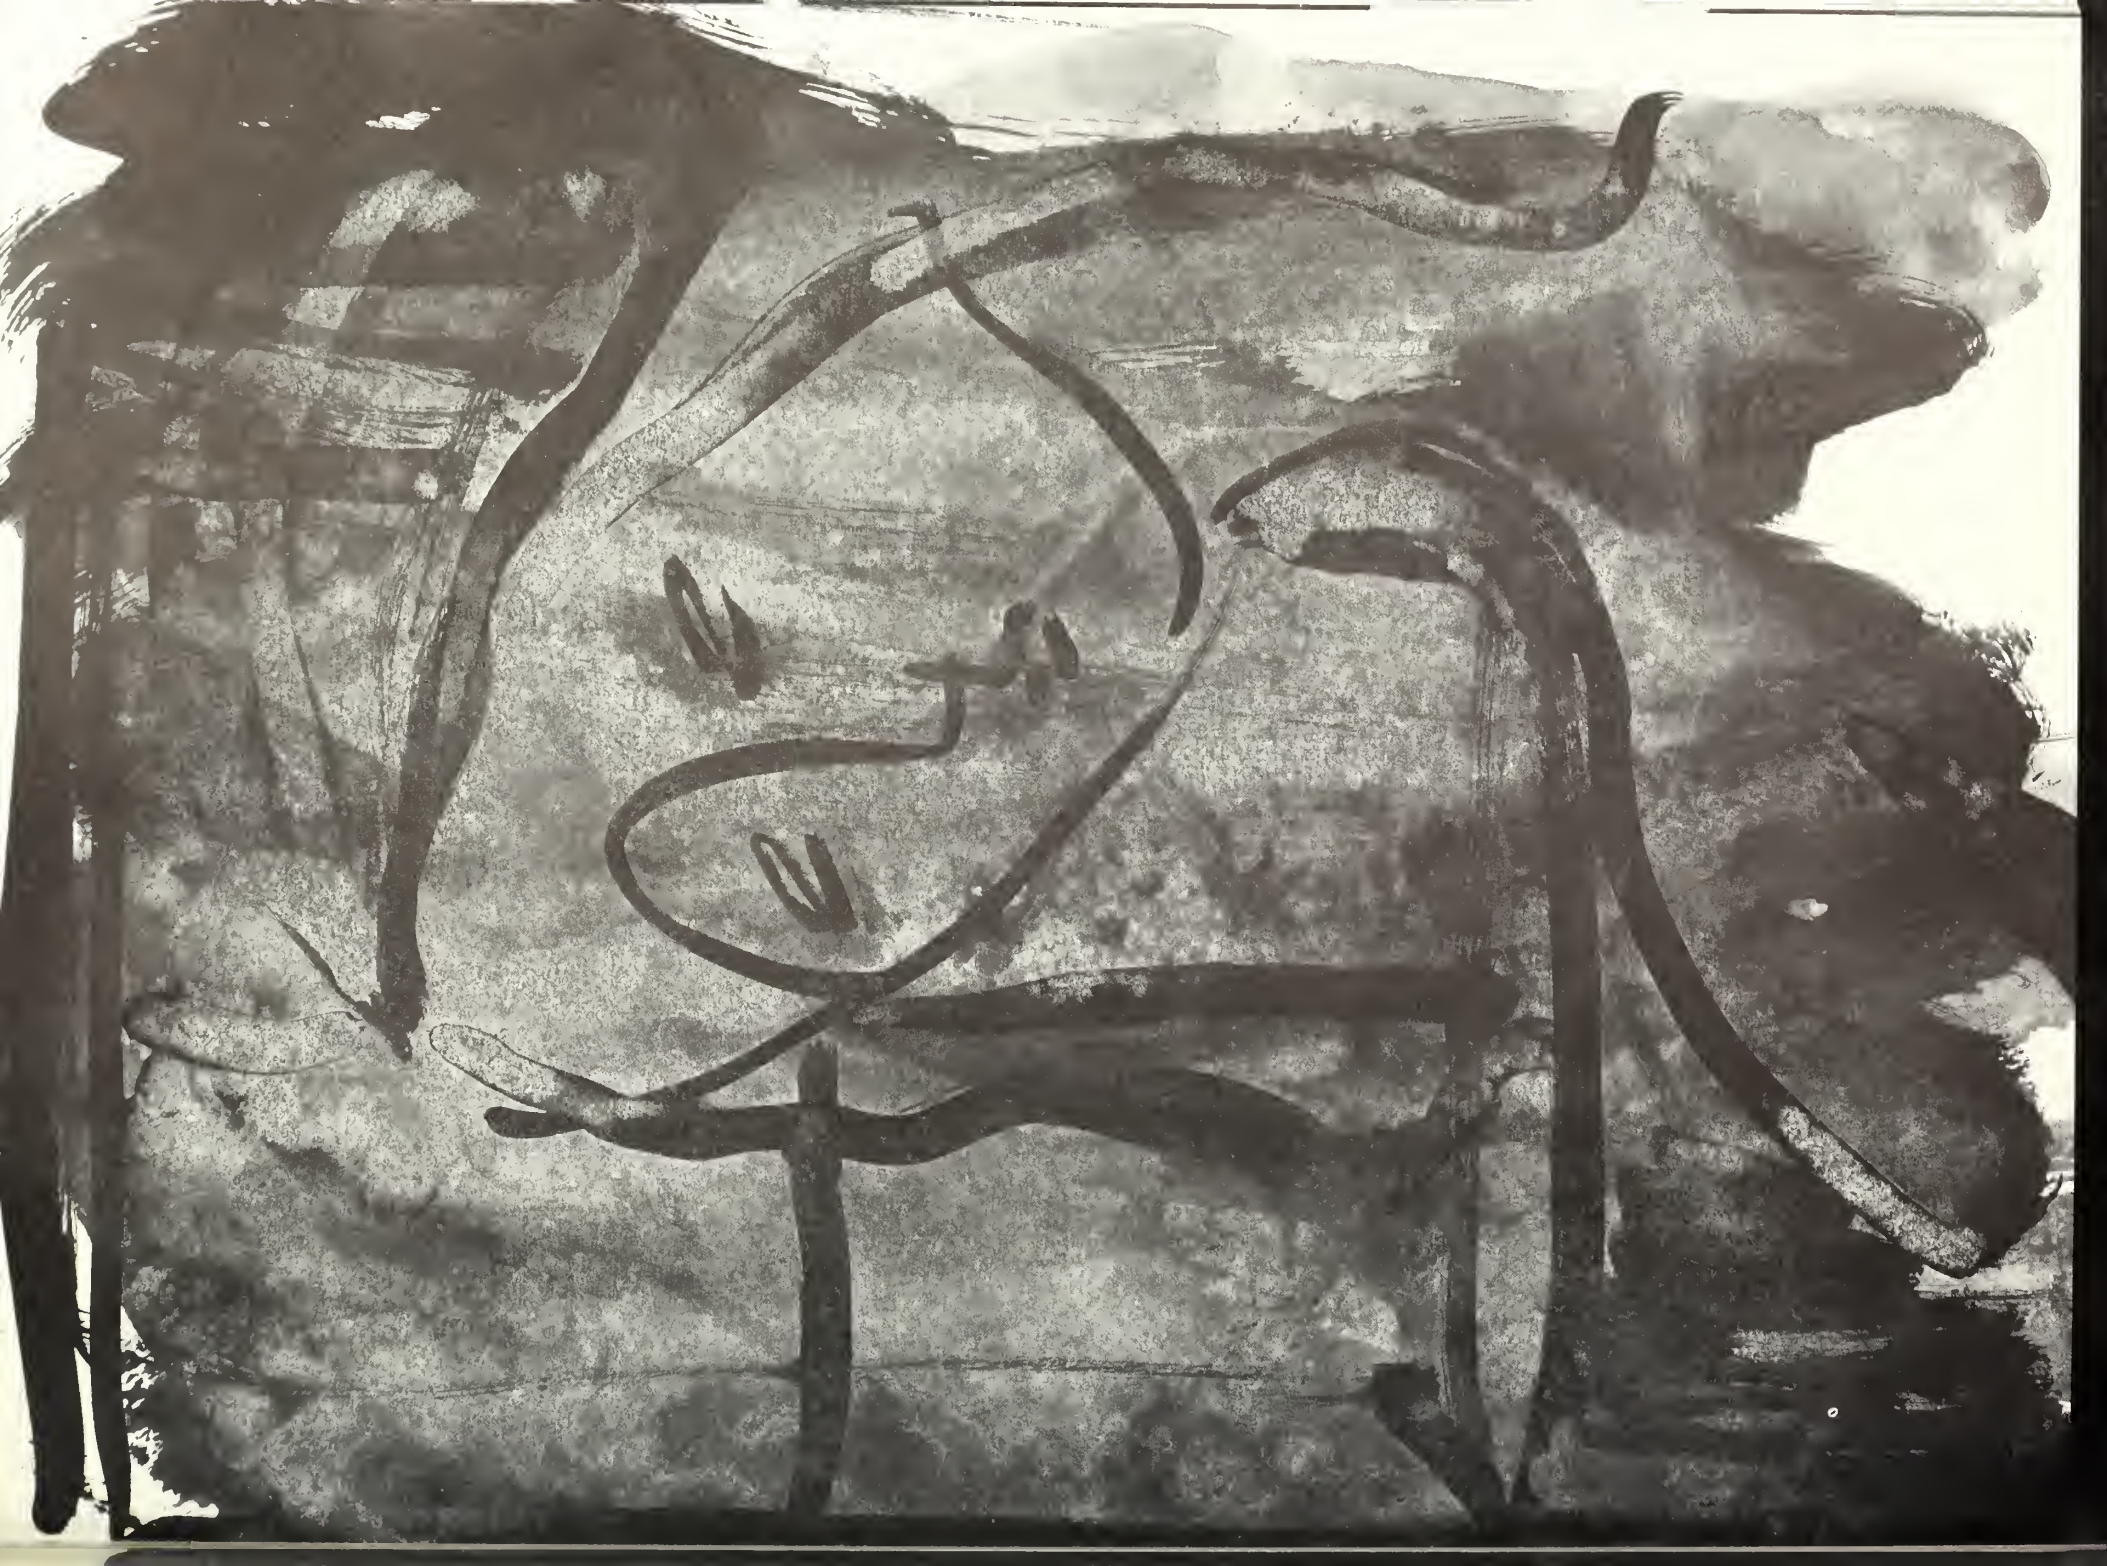
nothing, you will never say No to her, no.

Martha Fritz



NOT FALLING IN LOVE #9

The whip you use
is no longer tender,
but hard like a dried out snake.
I've revolved around you long enough.
You go along the river beating slaves;
making slices of their backs.
You remark that it gives you unusual pleasure.
I know that I am my own whip lashing into myself;
a dark moon snapped.
Here is something to show myself, I say.
But now, the faintest patch of light is beginning. The river's floor is visible and here we are, myself finding no pleasure.

"In one sense there is no death. The life of a soul on earth lasts beyond his departure. You will always feel that life touching yours, that voice speaking to you, that spirit looking out of other eyes, talking to you in the familiar things he touched, worked with, loved as familiar friends. He lives on in your life and in the lives of all others that knew him."
